

Untitled Essay

by

Nayely Martinez

A role model in my life, who I know is full of truthfulness and positive behavior, is my cousin Brenda. She is a person I can look up to and count on at all times. The quote, “Be the change you want to see,” by Mahatma Gandhi that I learned at Rice University reminds me of her. To me, this quote means be the person who you want to see in the world; act in a way that is morally just. In other words, the quote means that if you feel miserable, flip that attitude to the opposite and smile.